With most scientists it is no longer good form to regard the first chapter of Genesis as any thing more than a poem, the work of a wise but uninspired man. High authority advises the students of science no longer to trouble themselves with these theologies, for their statements are false and their order is wrong. On this I join issue, and propose, as Professor Huxley says, to test this view in the light of facts. As the questions which arise are questions in astronomy, geology, and other departments of natural science, nothing better can be desired than that they should be decided by a jury of experts in these studies. In trials involving commercial law it is desirable to get a jury familiar with its principles. In questions of maritime law experts in that department are sought. In questions of mechanics or engineering men who are to decide them ought to have a knowledge of their principles. With equal justice it is claimed that men acquainted with science are best qualified-I should say ought to be best qualified-to judge of the character of a document purporting to state facts in the antehuman history of our world. The desirableness of such a jury needs, however, a twofold qualification. First, that the science which they hold is itself true. The world has seen an amazing amount of science which, it is now told, is rubbish; and it very strongly inclines to the belief that much which is held in biology, atomics, and other metaphysico-physics will eventually prove to belong to the same class. And, secondly, they must be so clear-sighted as not to mistake their own...
